MP may lose his top job

GAY MP Chris Bryant is facing moves to sack him from a key job advising Tony Blair on Europe.

Bryant, 41, sparked a furore last week when he posted a picture of himself in his underpants on a gay website.

Now we can reveal that while parliament debated school funding and anti-social behaviour on October 30, Bryant was busy e-mailing potential sex partners on a gay dating site.

Plot

And while serious MPs were starting their day catching up on breakfast news, Mr Bryant was busily exchanging photographs on Gaydar, a website used by for picking up strangers for quick thrills.

Later that day he was seeking takers for his "fit" body. He then continued cruising the site and exchanging e-mails until 5.50pm.

At 17.04pm he tells a gay stranger he will be going to a notorious gay haunt in Rupert Street, Soho, followed by a visit to the Bar Code, nearby.

Labour MPs are now plotting to remove the ex-vicar as head of Labour for Europe.
